INNOVATION UPDATE FROM ISRAEL IDEAS

Incision-Free Treatment For Chronic Acid Reflux

Acid reflux, or gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD), affects up to one in four Americans. For most, acid-neutralizing medication can control the chronic heartburn and regurgitation of acid. Some need surgical repair of the esophageal valve that normally keeps reflux from occurring. However, what if medication isn't helping and you don't want surgery?

About 13 million to 15 million patients in the U.S. fall into that category," says the CEO of Medigus, a medical-device company based in Israel. Medigus pioneered an incision-free outpatient procedure that solves the reflux problem in about an hour. The MUSE (Medigus Ultrasonic Surgical Endostapler) System enables physicians to reconstruct the esophageal valve through the mouth, eliminating the need for surgery in eligible patients. Assembled in Israel and protected by more than 70 patents, MUSE consists of a surgical stapler, mini-ultrasonic positioning sights and a miniaturized flexible video camera.
