INNOVATION UPDATE FROM ISRAEL IDEAS New Computer Vision Tech Fights Distracted Driving

Here's a secret about self-driving cars: They won't be entirely autonomous for quite some time. The near future belongs to semi-autonomous vehicles, which do most of the driving but pass over control to a human behind the wheel at certain points. But how will the car know if the driver is ready and alert for the transfer?

Israeli computer vision company Eyesight uses a single camera located near the infotainment system or above the instrument cluster, plus proprietary algorithms and artificial intelligence (AI), to judge if the driver is prepped to take the wheel.
