INNOVATION UPDATE FROM ISRAEL IDEAS

US Firefighters and Police Turn to an Israeli App to Save Lives

When Hurricane Irma hit the Florida Keys in September 2017, the new First Response app from Israeli-American company, Edgybees, helped first-responders identify distress calls in flooded areas. When wildfires hit Northern California a month later, the app steered firefighters away from danger.

This lifesaving augmented-reality (AR) app — designed only months before as an AR racing game for drone enthusiasts — is now used by more than a dozen fire and police departments in the United States, as well as the United Hatzalah emergency response network in Israel.
