INNOVATION UPDATE FROM
Hackers Meet Their Match

Have you ever noticed that when you are visiting your bank's website or checking out at an ecommerce site, the cursor inexplicably vanishes and you have to move your mouse to get it back? This "trick" is part of how an award-winning Israeli fraud-busting startup is keeping users safe online.

BioCatch calls the missing cursor maneuver and similar techniques it employs "behavioral biometrics." Biometrics is usually associated with unique identifying information such as a fingerprint, iris scan or DNA. But the way one behaves online is also unique. In the cursor example, users will respond in their own ways to a missing prompt – some will move the mouse in circles; others will quickly scan the corners of their screen.
