INNOVATION UPDATE FROM  ISRAEL IDEAS

Can this Israeli Innovation Improve the Lives of Millions?

During UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon's visit to Israel last October, he was treated to a demo of a machine the Israeli government has given to Bedouin families to convert organic waste into clean biogas for cooking, heating and lighting, as well as organic liquid crop fertilizer. His comment? "Millions of women and children die each year due to indoor smoke from open fires. This is just the thing they need. The UN should be purchasing these units!"

The family-size TevaGas (TG) backyard units, available as an easy-to-assemble kit, generate safe energy and fertilizer through bacterial anaerobic digestion of organic waste such as food scraps and animal manure. They provide a sustainable solution for off-grid urban and rural families, as well as, environmentally conscious homeowners and small farm owners in warmer climates.
